LION TAMING. A Talk With George Conklin About Wild Beasts.

St. Louis Republican. "Is your life insured?" asked a Republican reporter of George Conklin, the lion tamer and elephant breaker of the circus now in winter quarters at the fair grounds.

"No, I have not got a dollar on it. I'm not a good risk, and the companies won't write me."

"How do you feel when you enter the den of the lions and tigers?"

"I try not to think of anything, but I soon feel the excitement, which gradually becomes a delirium. Some time ago I was passing a family of leopards through their performance, and, while working one of them, and another fastened her fangs in the rear part of my thigh, and yet, through the excitement, I never felt the pain. Indeed, it was only when I turned round to engage one of the other animals that I found the brute had me fast, but I cowered her down. This, however, cannot always be done, and was a mistake of mine. I recall the death of my friend Herr Langel, Philadelphia. I received this extract from one of my Australian correspondents:

"Mr. G. A. Courtney, proprietor and manager of the zoological circus bearing his name, wrote from San Domingo, W. I., September 16, as under: Last night at 10 o'clock the well known lion tamer, Herr Eilrich Langel, Philadelphia, Pa., entered the den of the Brazilian tigers attached to the circus, and had nearly concluded his performance with them when he made a false step, and one of the tigers caught him by the head and neck, and in less than five seconds he was torn to pieces. His jugular vein was cut, his ear on the right side completely eaten off, and his body was a mass of mud and blood. The tent was densely packed with people, and the scene that followed it is impossible to describe. The guard and also a few private individuals commenced firing with revolvers and rifles at the tiger, and soon killed it, thereby enabling the attendants to drag the body of Langel through the compartment. The remaining living tiger at once fell upon the dead animal in presence of the audience and tore it into fragments."

"Do you go armed into the cages?"

"No, sir. Three years ago in St. Louis during the night the lions dragged a performing leopard through the bars and devoured it. When I went to the cage next morning (Sunday) all that remained of the creature was its head and one leg. That leopard was a pet and good performer, which drew the people, and when I told Mr. Cole he said, 'Well, George, can you do anything with your friends' disposal. I trust that they will have pleasant trips, and keep sharp lookout for trains for that they won't get run over, and so bring their tramp to an untimely end.'"

Lincoln and One of His Old Friends. In February, 1880, Mr. Lincoln made a trip to New York, where he was engaged to lecture in the Cooper institute on the 27th of the month.

After the delivery of this lecture he came on to New Hampshire and spoke in Manchester and Concord. While on his journey he stopped over night with a friend in Lawrence, sharing his humble quarters in preference to the more comfortable hotel, for the friend was poor. The next morning Mr. Lincoln proceeded to his engagement at Manchester. Weeks and months rolled by, filled with the stirring scenes of the presidential campaign, in which Mr. Lincoln was the central and remarkable figure. Mr. Lincoln was elected, and in March, 1861, he was inaugurated. One evening a little later there was a reception at the white house. The crowd was almost solid and impenetrable mass. It surged about the president, and it was with extreme difficulty that many were enabled to take him by the hand.

Suddenly there was a commotion, and a voice was heard to exclaim, as its owner strove his way through the crowd: "Abe! Abe!" Mr. Lincoln looked up and recognized and warmly greeted his Lawrence friend. The next day, in the privacy of the white house, Mr. Lincoln wrote a request to the collector of the port of Boston to make a place for his Lawrence friend.

The senate amendments to the army and fortification appropriation bills was not occurred in, and conference committees were appointed.

The chairman of the committee on foreign affairs reported back the resolution calling on the president for the correspondence between the United States in regard to the treatment of Jews in Russia. Adopted.

The speaker laid before the house today additional papers in response to the resolution of the house of representatives, July 15, 1882, calling for any information in possession of the department of state in reference to any changes or modifications of the stipulations which the French Cable company made with the United States.

The additional information consists of a letter from the president of the company, Paris, in which he states the company declines to further disclose its affairs, having complied with all the conditions. It agreed to convey free United States government messages. The statement in reference to the rates have been reduced since the schedule was agreed upon at the time the contracts were signed.

The house went into committee of the whole on the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The clause relating to leasing a portion of the Yellowstone park was struck out and an amendment made prohibiting the secretary of the interior from making a lease for any portion thereof. Adopted.

Adopted.

On point of order by Mr. Holman, the clause appropriating $1,500 to pay expenses of the circuit judges going and returning from court was struck out of the bill.

A long discussion arose over the item of appropriations for the benefit of families of deceased representatives. Two additional clauses were added appropriating $5,000 to the legal representatives of Andrew Herron, of Louisiana, late member elect of the 48 congress and $1,072 to the widow of the Godlove S. Orth.

On motion of Mr. Valentine, an amendment was submitted confirming all selections of land in severalty heretofore made by the Santee Sioux on their reservation in Nebraska.

The amendment as amended was adopted. The committee then rose and reported the bill to the house.

It being rumored that the friends of the bonded spirits bill had organized their forces for an attempt to call up that measure at the night session of the house, on motion of Mr. Hiscok, and without passing the sundry civil bill the house adjourned.

THE SUGAR CONTROVERSY. WASHINGTON, February 23.—The house committee on foreign affairs agreed to report favorably on the resolution asking for further information concerning the importation of sugar from the Sandwich Islands, and whether or not frauds are practiced by the trade, etc.

A True Journalist. WASHINGTON, February 23.—The news of the death of Sam Medill, of the Chicago Tribune, was received with regret in Washington, whither, in a former search of a healthful climate, he came and remained several sessions as a correspondent. He was very popular among the fraternity here, some of whom, from other associations, can recall many acts of great personal and professional kindness, and notably on an occasion when he employed and sent on a special mission to Ireland a reporter of another paper, who was nearly insane from domestic troubles, and who had lost his place and attempted suicide. Sam, without ostentation, or an avowal of his generous purpose, made a place for an Irish correspondent of the most brilliant and loyal work a newspaper ever earned, and which the rebuilt journalist did in Illinois for The Tribune. A telegram was received here to-night from his brother, Joe Medill. It is as follows: "He died with a copy of the day's Tribune on his bed, and rejoicing in the 'scop' of the President's funeral. A true newspaper man to the last."

The Mexican Treaty. Special Dispatch to The Bee. WASHINGTON, February 23.—Promoters of the Mexican treaty have given double that it can be ratified. The present indications are that if these shall not be so expensive session of the senate the consideration of the subject will be postponed until winter. There is no disposition to take time to discuss it in the few days that remain of this session. The outlook for the confirmation of the treaty

Politics in Vassar. A country newspaper reporter visited Vassar college for the purpose of getting the views of the young ladies on the tariff question. To the very first one whom he encountered he opened the subject without any circumlocution by remarking: "I suppose you girls go in for protection?"

"We did," she said, with a low sweet giggle, "but if they are going to increase the tax on chewing gum we are all free traders."

RAILWAY NEWS.

The Denver Tribune says: "There will be some important railroad developments in Colorado by the early summer. In fact, steps have already been taken which will materially change the present system of railroading in the northern portion of the state. It has recently become known in Denver business circles that the Nickel Plate syndicate has purchased the franchise of the Denver & Northwestern which connects at Canfield with the Boulder Valley road and terminates at Longmont. A surveying party has already been equipped and will be placed in the field this week to map out the route for a connecting line between Denver and Canfield. Work will also be soon begun beyond Boulder, and it is positively stated that a great enterprise is contemplated. The first purpose of the syndicate is to build from Denver to the principal points in Middle and Estes parks, and also give a new outlet to Central. The immediate purpose is to develop northern and northwestern Colorado, and the ultimate object is a short line to Salt Lake City.
